This year Armstrong Downes Ltd is celebrating 20 years of building excellence in the Hutt Valley. The company has become synonymous with the changing landscape of the region, working on projects including Hutt City New World, the new Indoor Sports Centre at Hutt Park and development at Chilton St James School spanning 18 years.

And, on July 25th over 200 people gathered at the Harvey Norman Centre, completed in 2007 by the company, to celebrate the work and people that have contributed to their success over the years, and to reflect on how the company and their people have evolved since 1992.

With an eye towards the next 20 years, Simon Taylor and Tony Doile, directors at the construction and project management company, used the occasion to reveal their new name and positioning.

They will now be operating under the name Armstrong Downes Commercial.

Armstrong Downes Commercial is a name you know and can trust, and one that reflects the company's focus on constructing the commercial buildings and facilities that the Hutt Valley and Wellington communities need for business, education and lifestyle. The new name positioning statement, 'we're listening', comes with a clear promise that when it comes to commercial construction, Armstrong Downes Commercial is listening, from your first idea to the finishing touches.
